Project Freedom's roots go back to the 1970's when two concerned and dedicated women wanted to provide recreation to young people with disabilities outside of their homes. They started the Nottingham Recreation Center for the Physically Limited, better known as NRCPL, and a board of directors was formed to give the organization direction and guidance.

NRCPL's popularity began to grow with new ideas and programs for many people with disabilities who needed recreational and social activities.

For the most part, many of these young adults lived with their parents or other family members. When caretakers were no longer able to help, they didn't have any options other than nursing homes. Project Freedom grew from the roots of NRCPL as a solution to this problem.

Project Freedom's first endeavor was the construction of a 30-unit apartment complex in Robbinsville, NJ, completed in 1991. All of the apartments are fully accessible for people with disabilities.

In 1995 a shared living house adjacent to our first apartment complex was completed. Here tenants share a common living room, dining room and kitchen and have private bedrooms with bathroom. The Robbinsville "campus" houses people with various types of disabilities.

Project Freedom's third venture was the completion of Project Freedom at Hamilton in October 2001, creating 48 apartments in Hamilton Township, Mercer County. This campus has eight apartment buildings of six units each and a large Community Center for group gatherings.

The completion of Project Freedom at Lawrence marked the fourth accomplishment in 2003 with 54 apartments in Lawrence Township, Mercer County. This campus has nine buildings of six units each. It also boasts a large Community Center with offices and room for group meetings.

In 2010, Freedom Village at Woodstown was completed in Salem County, NJ. It consists of five, two story apartment buildings with 12 units each, and a Community Center for offices and tenant use.

Freedom Village at Hopewell, a 72 unit complex in Hopewell Township, NJ, is our latest and largest project. Completed in Feb 2014, it offers one, two and three bedroom apartments with 25% being wheelchair accessible and 75% being universally designed for anybody's use. The universal design means that apartments can be easily adapted for someone in a wheelchair.

Project Freedom's next development will be in Toms River, NJ. It will feature our two story building model and a separate Community Center.
